A Relation of the manner of the Election and Installation of the Noble Order of St. George, at Windſore, &c.

THE Founder of this Noble Order was Edward the third King of England, a person of a most accomplisht Virtue, this most excellent Prince having exceedingly prevailed both against the French and Scottish Kings, discomforted their Armies; and taken one of them in Person, ordained this most Noble Order and Society of Knights, so to adorn their Valour, manifested in the Warres with honour the reward of Virtue. Their number 26. no more ut pretium faciat raritas. The Lawes and Statutes of this Noble Order were first Instituted and devised by this Victorious Prince King Edward, of that name the third; after revised and ratified by many of the succeeding Kings. And on the Reformation of Religion much altered by King Edward the sixth.

In their Elections two things there are which they especially observe.

First, that the party nominated, be a Gentleman of Name, and Arms; for three descents both by the Fathers side, and the Mothers side.

The second thing to be observed is, that the party nominated be without spot or foul reproach: as viz: not convict of Heresy; nor attaint of Treason; nor by his Prodigality and Riot decayed in his Estate, by means whereof whereof he is not able to conserve the Honor of his Order; nor such a one as ever fled in the day of battail; his Sovereign Lord or his Lieutenant being in the field, In all which cases a Knight elected and installed may also if it please the Sovereign, be degraded.

The Party chosen by the Prince, if he be a stranger, is certified thereof soon after by letters from the Sovereign: and many times the Statutes of that Order have been sent unto him to consider of them, whether or no he will accept of this Election. If he accept it (as no question but he will) then doth the Sovereign forthwith send unto him by his Ambassadour and the chief Herald (commonly) the whole Habit of the Order, with the Garter and the Collar wherewith they do invest him. And on the other side, the Prince or Stranger so invested, within convenient time, send their sufficient Deputy with a Mantle of blew Velvet, to be installed in their room at St. GEORGE'S Church in Winfore. But if the party chosen be a Subject of the Kingdom, the Garter is delievred to him presently upon his Election, to signify that he is chose into the Order. Afterwards in the Chapter-house, upon the reading of his Commission before the Sovereign or his Deputy, he is invested with the Robe and with the Hood. Then follows the Installment performed with many grave and magnificent Ceremonies: which done, he doth receive the Collar of the Order. This at their Installations have always an Oath administered, that to their power, during the time they shall be Fellows of the Order, they shall defend the Honour, Quarrels, Rights and Lordships, of the Sovereign, and that they shall endeavour to preserve the Honour of the said Order: and all the Statutes of it they shall well observe, without fraud or covin.

Ha ving

Having thus spoken of the statutes of his most Noble Order whereby they are and have been governed, we will descend in the next place to give you notice of the Patron, which after the opinions of those times they chose unto themselves. (Of which this Polidore Virgil. This order is (saith he) dedicated unto St. GEORGE as the chief Saint, and patron of the men of War, whose Festival they therefore solemnly observe with many noble Ceremonies. But what need Polidore have been produced unto this purpose, since from the Charter of the Institution we have a testimony more authentically. For there King Edward tells us that to the Honor of Almighty God, and of the Blessed Virgin St. Mary, And of the Glorious Martyr St. GEORGE, Patron of the Right Noble Realm of England, and to the exaltation of the Holy Catholick Faith, he had ordained, established, created and founded within his Castle of Windsore, a company of twenty six Noble Knights to be of the said most Noble Order of St. GEORGE, named the Garter. It is true indeed what Polidore hath well observed, with great Ceremony and Solemnity the Knights do celebrate this Feast: Attending both on the Vesper and the day itself at Divine Service, attired in the most rich and stately Mantles of the Order: and gallantly adorned with their most rich and sumptuous collars (which we call of SS.) the Image of St. GEORGE, garnished with pearls and precious stones, appendant to them. In which their going to the Church, and in their sitting at the Table, they go and set by two and two, every One with his Fellow which is fore against him in his stall. And if by chance it happen that his Fellow be not present, he doth both go and set alone, I say if it chance to happen: for all the Fellows are obliged to be there personally present, without a just and reasonable cause acceptable to the Sovereign or his Deputy, and signified by special letters of Excuse. Other Pomp and rich magnificence of this Feast I forbear to mention, as being unable to expresse it. The mind is then best satisfied in such things as this, when the eye hath seen them.

Now followeth a perfect Catalogue of the Knights of the most Honourable Order of the Garter, made by our Gracious Sovereign, King Charles the second.

That the Knights of this most honourable Order are called in Latine Equites Georgiani; St. GEORGES Knights, and sometimes also in English, as in that passage noted out of Poly Albion.

The other Ornaments and Habits belonging to this Order, besides the Garter; are a Gown, a Kirtle, a Chaperon, a Cloak, a Girdle and a Collar; all stately and Magnificent both for stuffe and fashion, but worn onely upon dayes of Extraordinary solemnity for ordinary use, besides the Garter, which is for every dayes wearing, and their Cloak with the Sun on the left shoulder of it in his full Glory, which last was added by his late Majesty of ever Blessed Memory, they have a blew Ribbon which they wear about their necks; with the picture, or rather portraiture of the GEORGE appendant to it.

CHARLES the Second, King of Great Brittain, France, and Ireland, and Sovereign of the most Noble Order of St. George, called the Garter, was pleased to dignifie therewith these persons following, Viz.

1649. MAurice Count Palatine of the Rhene, the third surviving Son of the Queen of Bohemia.
